PARIS AND BERLIN CALL FOR GLOBAL TAX-HAVEN BLACKLIST

FT.COM

Paris and Berlin are pressing industrialised nations to pull together a common blacklist of territories that breach transparency standards, in the toughest government responses yet to the Panama Papers affair.

Wolfgang Schäuble, Germany's finance minister, and Michel Sapin, his French counterpart, also emphasised the need for sharing and publishing the names of the ultimate beneficiaries of all corporate structures, including shell companies, trusts and foundations that can offer anonymity to their users.

The German and French governments launched their plans in separate initiatives on Monday as Brussels prepares to announce proposals this week to force large EU-based companies to disclose their annual financial results on a country-bycountry basis, including for offshore jurisdictions.

"We need full transparency worldwide," Mr Schäuble said as he released a plan entitled "Fighting effectively against tax cheating, tax evasion and money laundering."

Both Mr Schäuble and Mr Sapin, who have led the way on previous global financial transparency projects, such as the automatic exchange of information between banks, want to seize the opportunity created by the Panama Papers leak to force through further reforms. Paris put Panama back on its own blacklist last week after removing it in 2012 and plans in the coming weeks to publish a list of ultimate beneficiaries of trusts and foundations with assets or beneficiaries in France.
